

Fresh Powder!

Well, this looks like the last harrah... Cascade Mountain was closed, but Doug and I got in to help with the Pink Flamingo Camp that was going on where they train kids on jumps, boxes, tabletops, rails and other stuff I can't do yet. The weather was great and we ventured off and enjoyed some powder from all the snow that fell yesterday. It was great but powder like that (a little wet) was hard work. I was getting my Fischer RX8 skis with a tiny waist to float a little, but it wasn't the easiest thing.

Anyway, it was good to get out again. I'm thinking of going to Devil's Head next week since they're still open. Why not?

Here are a few pictures from today – enjoy!

-T

Andrew doing a jump

Doug in powder

Snow!

North Wall run

Original article: <https://www.skiwithtony.com/fresh-powder/>